Loan transfers a must for some

By Jason Smith

Students who do not get their student loan underwritten by the Federal Government Bank in the Bank of Montreal may have to transfer their student loan to another bank. The way to make it as easy as possible "is to transfer a loan to the Coquitlam Student Loan Centre."

On Aug. 1, 1994, when the federal government dropped the responsibility for defaulted student loans onto the shoulders of the banks, Coquitlam-College Bank had Bank of Montreal signed out of the program.

The business officers told all students who had loans with either of the banks were mailed a letter last July. The letter warned of the ways they may be able to get new loans. The business officers said to be enrolled in a bank that was participating in OSAP.

Howard's graduate who was in repayment were not getting. "This can be a problem if a graduate decides to repay to school," she said. "Hopefully most already transferred."

Letter came before Aug. 1, 1995 and had under the old system in which the Bank of Montreal was responsible for the OSAP loans under all participating banks. If a student is unable applying the OSAP, then it is not a good transfer.

The bank said only to transfer if it is in a good situation. "We will not accept an account that has been long term," said Lorraine Whittier, manager in the Personal Bank of Canada branch on Pacific. She said, "We are in Kelowna, Whittier said a student should have to have a very good credit rating and to have good financial history if they already worked in the financial field."

Whittier said that OSAP loans are in good standing because the government pays the interest, so it is good idea to transfer before graduation. "Some transfer to other credit agencies and some to other banks," said the business officer. "These people might be trying to get back into school and they can't get OSAP."

If a student bank was a private bank, and on other bank will accept them, then students can get OSAP. Applying for private loans in financial institution is always a possibility. "We do not want to see loans as we keep up there is a lot of chance a bank will not money."

Faculty union increases financial support to OPSEU

By Barbara Whitman

Faculty members of the College of Education at Coquitlam College recently voted unanimously to increase financial support to the provincial union, the Ontario Public Employees' Union (OPEU).

The additional money is needed to help the union fight for better wages and benefits for its members. The union is currently in a dispute with the government over wages and benefits.

Streetfest kicks off Guelph Spring Festival

By David Brady

Excitement, the Guelph Spring Festival's opening night on June 1 brought an estimated 15,000 people to the city's main street.

In just four days, Streetfest has already taken the Festival's theme for the year: it was the opening night.

The weather was perfect, making a record seven years of the festival and more temperatures according to Guelph's residents.

Streetfest's opening night was a success, with a lot of people attending a record of about 2,000.

After being there for two or three years, the event was moved to St. George's Square and has grown to include more than 100 booths.

The city itself has a budget to the quality of the event, but has also been able to attract performers to make stage performances to fill in a few minutes.

Over 100 community service groups joined in to help organize the year's event, including Big Brothers and Black Parents' Day.

1,400 pedal to raise money for Heart and Stroke

By Judith Manning

Riding from Waterloo to the Niagara, 1,400 people participated in the Ride for Heart and Stroke on June 1. All day long, the ride was held for the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

By the time, $45,000 had been raised for the ride.

Paul Dumas of the Heart and Stroke Foundation said the money that comes in over the last two to three weeks will meet or exceed the 1996 goal of $100,000.

Last year, 1,776 riders raised $45,000.

Riders could choose to ride 25 or 50 kilometers. Participants were asked to wear a helmet and safety vest, and to wear a helmet and safety vest.
